

Job Vacancy Development Chemist

Laleham Health & Beauty is a leading, UK based Contract Manufacturer for global health and beauty products. We currently have a vacancy for an experienced Development Chemist to join our growing R&D team. This is an excellent opportunity to join an innovative team in an established contract manufacture company, formulating for many well-known skin & hair care brands.

We require applicants with a degree in a science-based subject, as well as 5+ years' experience in cosmetics formulation, preferably within the contract manufacture sector. The successful candidate will need an in-depth knowledge of materials, new innovations and technologies within cosmetics & toiletries and will have a proven record of success in product development from concept to shelf, delivering products within regulatory / customer restrictions, on time and within budget.

Experience within a factory environment would also be an advantage as the successful candidate will be responsible for scale-up and full manufacture. The role will involve dealing with internal and external customers at all levels and will have responsibility for the supervision of one or more Development Technicians.
